Nina Gibans, director of the Cleveland Area Arts Council, will be a principal speaker at a two-day conference of curators from art museums and university galleries throughout Ohio. The meeting will be held at the Cleveland Museum of Art, Friday and Saturday, March 15 and 16.

The meeting, second of its kind in the past year, is partially funded by the Ohio Arts Council, said William S. Talbot, associate curator of paintings at the Cleveland Museum and coordinator of the conference.

More than 20 are expected to attend, representing a dozen institutions. The group will review matters of particular interest to art museums, including conservation of art objects, future curatorial personnel requirements, and plans for cooperative organization of exhibits.
